

Nashville Union.

• SAMBROS & CO., Publishers.
TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1865.

Enlargement of the Union.

The advertising patronage of the Union has increased so steadily and so rapidly, we have been compelled either to leave out, daily, for some months past, about four columns of advertisements, or to reduce that much the space assigned to reading matter. We preferred the loss inflicted by the former.

The advertising patronage of the Union has increased so steadily and so rapidly, we have been compelled either to leave out, daily, for some months past, about four columns of advertisements, or to reduce that much the space assigned to reading matter.

We preferred the loss inflicted by the former.

But that we may have "ample room and space enough to accommodate both advertisers and readers, we have enlarged our sheet and reduced the size of type employed in the composition of reading matter.

This will enable us to do justice to all classes of our patrons.

The Union has ever been a favorite with the people of Nashville and Middle Tennessee.

Citizens and strangers have given it its support, and placed it safe, in point of property, of any newspaper established in Nashville.

We feel deeply grateful for this opportunity to assure the public that we shall spare no pains to increase the value of our paper.

The Union is the first newspaper to raise the standard of the National Government in this city, after its recognition in 1862 by Saxon troops.

It gave the Administration of President Lincoln a steady and resolute support, upholding the believed cause undeniably in his great experiment of proclaiming freedom to the slave, and vindicating all his leading measures for the suppression of the rebellion.

In like manner it will support President Johnson in his efforts, now that the war is over, to see the late rebel States to their proper place in the Federal Union; to maintain the freedom of the former slaves, and in all reasonable and just measures to protect them in their right of life, liberty, and property. We believe it is the duty of the President to do right to elevate the whole nation, and in every way to further the cause of justice and humanity.

The Union does not propose to fix the price of labor, but leaves that to be regulated by the supply and demand; but it requires wages to be paid in a liberal open market, and the security it finds only in freeventure, and otherwise it has no right to fix the price of labor.

But beyond this simple power, there are two other powers in the Constitution, by virtue of which all needful guarantees can be made to the safety and welfare of the people, and it is the duty of the government to exercise those powers.

Those who wish their services must,

therefore, conform to the rules and regulations established by the Bureau. If they do not, they will be used in all cases in which they are made with freedom for the ensuring their safety.

The Bureau does not propose to fix the

price of labor, but leaves that to be regulated

by the supply and demand.

But beyond this simple power, there are

two other powers in the Constitution, by

virtue of which all needful guarantees can

be made to the safety and welfare of the

people, and it is the duty of the government to exercise those powers.

Those who wish their services must,

therefore, conform to the rules and

regulations established by the Bureau. If

they do not, they will be used in all cases in which they are made with freedom for the ensuring their safety.

The Bureau does not propose to fix the

price of labor, but leaves that to be regulated

by the supply and demand.

But beyond this simple power, there are

two other powers in the Constitution, by

virtue of which all needful guarantees can

be made to the safety and welfare of the

people, and it is the duty of the government to exercise those powers.

Those who wish their services must,

therefore, conform to the rules and

regulations established by the Bureau. If

they do not, they will be used in all cases in which they are made with freedom for the ensuring their safety.

The Bureau does not propose to fix the

price of labor, but leaves that to be regulated

by the supply and demand.

But beyond this simple power, there are

two other powers in the Constitution, by

virtue of which all needful guarantees can

be made to the safety and welfare of the

people, and it is the duty of the government to exercise those powers.

Those who wish their services must,

therefore, conform to the rules and

regulations established by the Bureau. If

they do not, they will be used in all cases in

which they are made with freedom for the ensuring their safety.

The Bureau does not propose to fix the

price of labor, but leaves that to be regulated

by the supply and demand.

But beyond this simple power, there are

two other powers in the Constitution, by

virtue of which all needful guarantees can

be made to the safety and welfare of the

people, and it is the duty of the government to exercise those powers.

Those who wish their services must,

therefore, conform to the rules and

regulations established by the Bureau. If

they do not, they will be used in all cases in

which they are made with freedom for the ensuring their safety.

The Bureau does not propose to fix the

price of labor, but leaves that to be regulated

by the supply and demand.

But beyond this simple power, there are

two other powers in the Constitution, by

virtue of which all needful guarantees can

be made to the safety and welfare of the

people, and it is the duty of the government to exercise those powers.

Those who wish their services must,

therefore, conform to the rules and

regulations established by the Bureau. If

they do not, they will be used in all cases in

which they are made with freedom for the ensuring their safety.

The Bureau does not propose to fix the

price of labor, but leaves that to be regulated

by the supply and demand.

But beyond this simple power, there are

two other powers in the Constitution, by

virtue of which all needful guarantees can

be made to the safety and welfare of the

people, and it is the duty of the government to exercise those powers.

Those who wish their services must,

therefore, conform to the rules and

regulations established by the Bureau. If

they do not, they will be used in all cases in

which they are made with freedom for the ensuring their safety.

The Bureau does not propose to fix the

price of labor, but leaves that to be regulated

by the supply and demand.

But beyond this simple power, there are

two other powers in the Constitution, by

virtue of which all needful guarantees can

be made to the safety and welfare of the

people, and it is the duty of the government to exercise those powers.

Those who wish their services must,

therefore, conform to the rules and

regulations established by the Bureau. If

they do not, they will be used in all cases in

which they are made with freedom for the ensuring their safety.

The Bureau does not propose to fix the

price of labor, but leaves that to be regulated

by the supply and demand.

But beyond this simple power, there are

two other powers in the Constitution, by

virtue of which all needful guarantees can

be made to the safety and welfare of the

people, and it is the duty of the government to exercise those powers.

Those who wish their services must,

therefore, conform to the rules and regulations established by the Bureau. If

</div